Equality Impact Assessment

The Equality Act 2010 replaces the previous anti-discrimination laws with a single Act. It simplifies the law, removing inconsistencies and making it easier for people to understand and comply with it. It also strengthens the law in important ways, to help tackle discrimination and equality. The majority of the Act came into force on 1 October 2010.

Public bodies are required in it to have due regard to the need to:

- eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment, victimisation and any other conduct prohibited under the Act
- advance equality of opportunity between people who share a protected characteristic and people who do not share it, and
- foster good relations between people who share a protected characteristic and people who do not share it.

The public sector Equality Duty came into force on 5 April 2011. The duty ensures that all public bodies play their part in making society fairer by tackling discrimination and providing equality of opportunity for all. It ensures that public bodies consider the needs of all individuals in their day to day work – in shaping policy, delivering services and in relation to their own employees.

The Equality Duty encourages public bodies to understand how different people will be affected by their activities so that policies and services are appropriate and accessible to all and meet different people's needs. By understanding the effect of their activities on different people, and how inclusive public services can support and open up people's opportunities, public bodies are better placed to deliver policies and services that are efficient and effective.

The new equality duty replaces the three previous public sector equality duties, for race, disability and gender. The new equality duty covers the following protected characteristics:

- age
- disability
- gender reassignment
- pregnancy and maternity
- race this includes ethnic or national origins, colour or nationality
- religion or belief including lack of belief
- sex
- sexual orientation.

It also applies to marriage and civil partnership, but only in respect of the requirement to have due regard to the need to eliminate discrimination.

The Council has also decided to treat people who have care experience as if they had a protected characteristic under the law.

Having due regard means consciously thinking about the three aims of the equality duty as part of the process of decision-making. This means that consideration of equality issues must influence the decisions reached by public bodies, including how they act as employers, how they develop, evaluate and review policies, how they design, deliver and evaluate services, and how they commission and procure from others.

Having due regard to the need to advance equality of opportunity involves considering the need to:

- remove or minimise disadvantages suffered by people due to their protected characteristics
- meet the needs of people with protected characteristics, and
- encourage people with protected characteristics to participate in public life or in other activities where their participation is low.

Fostering good relations involves tackling prejudice and promoting understanding between people who share a protected characteristic and others.

Complying with the equality duty may involve treating some people better than others, as far as this is allowed by discrimination law. For example, it may involve making use of an exception or the positive action provisions in order to provide a service in a way which is appropriate for people who share a protected characteristic.

The Equality Duty also explicitly recognises that disabled people's needs may be different from those of non-disabled people. Public bodies should therefore take account of disabled people's impairments when making decisions about policies or services. This might mean making reasonable adjustments or treating disabled people better than non-disabled people in order to meet their needs.

There is no explicit requirement to refer to the Equality Duty in recording the process of consideration but it is good practice to do so. Keeping a record of how decisions were reached will help public bodies demonstrate that they considered the aims of the Equality Duty. Keeping a record of how decisions were reached will help public bodies show how they considered the Equality Duty. Producing an Equality Impact Assessment after a decision has been reached will not achieve compliance with the Equality Duty.

It is recommended that assessments are carried out in respect of new or revised policies and that a copy of the assessment is included as an appendix to the report provided to the decision makers at the relevant Cabinet, Committee or Scrutiny meeting.

Where it is clear from initial consideration that a policy will not have any effect on equality for any of the protected characteristics, no further analysis or action is necessary.

Public bodies should take a proportionate approach when complying with the Equality Duty. In practice, this means giving greater consideration to the Equality Duty where a policy or function has the potential to have a discriminatory effect or impact on equality of opportunity, and less consideration where the potential effect on equality is slight. The Equality Duty requires public bodies to think about people's different needs and how these can be met.

EQUALITY IMPACT ASSESSMENT (EIA)

Directorate:	Executive Directorate	Title of the Lead Officer responsible for EIA	Head of Health, Safety, Compliance and Emergency
			Planning
Name of the policy or function to be		Fire Safety Policy assessed:
Title of the Officer undertaking the		Head of Health, Safety, Compliance and assessment:		Emergency Planning
Is this a new or an existing policy or function?		Existing Policy

1. What are the aims and objectives of the policy or function?

The aim of this policy is, to provide a robust fire safety framework which will be implemented to secure the safety and wellbeing of everyone within our community, protect our assets and ensure the safety of persons engaged to fight any potential fire in any of our properties.

- 2. What outcomes do you want to achieve from the policy or function? Protect life. Protect assets.
 - 3. Who is intended to benefit from the policy or function?

All tenants and their visitors. Our employees who work on our properties, 3rd party contractors and those employed by the Fire Service.

3. Who are the main stakeholders in relation to the policy or function?

Housing - Independent Living and General Needs

Housing - Repairs

All Tenants and their visitors

Asset Management & Development – Capital Works and Estates

4. What baseline quantitative data do you have about the policy or function relating to the different equality strands?

Housing hold a register of those tenants with a vulnerability and this data is reviewed annually.

6. What baseline qualitative data do you have about the policy or function relating to the different equality strands? Fire Evacuation Drills are carried out in our independent living schemes. We also have a stay put policy in these schemes. Pre-sign up, prospective tenants that would be classed as vulnerable will be identified and additional support services will be accessed. The Neighbourhood Officers will provide additional support by means of extra calls or visits to any tenants that are identified as vulnerable. Alerts are placed on the Open Housing system.

Directorate:	Executive	Title of the Lead	Head of Health,
	Directorate	Officer responsible	Safety,
		for EIA	Compliance and
			Emergency
7 What has sta	lahaldar aanaultati	on if couried out was	Planning on, if carried out, revolearly defined proces
	•		, ,
supporting vulnerabilities within this policy and the association with the tenancy policy owned by the Housing Department.
☐ Does the police	cy or function target	or exclude a specif	ic equality group or community? Does it affect some equality groups or communities differently? If yes, can this be justified? Yes. All reasonable adjustments will be made for those with vulnerabilities that impact a person's ability to evacuate from a dwelling and is supported by a PEEP.
		be equally accessed	by all equality groups or communities? Yes. If no, can this be justified? N/A ☐ Are there barriers that might make access difficult or stop different equality groups or communities accessing the policy or function? No
. , ,	-
☐ Could the policy or function promote or contribute to equality and good relations between different groups? If so, how? Individual tenants with known vulnerabilities that would impact on being evacuated will be considered for a place on an independent living scheme, be prioritised for a ground floor flat and have a vulnerable person's marker against the property address.
☐ What further evidence is needed to understand the impact on equality?
, ,	The Policy and guidance defines the responsibilities of departments, officers, and committees. Offers clear information of each person(s) responsibility, irrespective
		acii persori(s) respons	sibility, irrespective of any protected characteristics 9. On the basis of the analysis above what actions, if any, will you need to take in respect of each of the equality strands?
Age:		The Policy and assoc	•
Disability:		specifically takes into account disability. The Policy and guidance requires that all known vulnerable individuals within BBC
Gender:
Gender Reassignment:		shall have Personal Emergency Evacuation Plans (PEEPs) drawn up, at the commencement of their tenancy, where there may be a requirement for assisted evacuation.
Marriage and Civil Partnership:
Pregnancy and Maternity:
Race:
Religion and Belief
Sexual Orientation
Care Experience:

Executive Director:
I am satisfied with the results of this EIA. I undertake to review and monitor progress against the actions proposed in response to this impact assessment.
Signature: