

Appendix 3*Equality Impact Assessment

The Equality Act 2010 replaces the previous anti-discrimination laws with a single Act. It simplifies the law, removing inconsistencies and making it easier for people to understand and comply with it. It also strengthens the law in important ways, to help tackle discrimination and equality. The majority of the Act came into force on 1 October 2010.

Public bodies are required in it to have due regard to the need to:

- eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment, victimisation and any other conduct prohibited under the Act
- advance equality of opportunity between people who share a protected characteristic and people who do not share it, and
- foster good relations between people who share a protected characteristic and people who do not share it.

The public sector Equality Duty came into force on 5 April 2011. The duty ensures that all public bodies play their part in making society fairer by tackling discrimination and providing equality of opportunity for all. It ensures that public bodies consider the needs of all individuals in their day to day work – in shaping policy, delivering services and in relation to their own employees.

The Equality Duty encourages public bodies to understand how different people will be affected by their activities so that policies and services are appropriate and accessible to all and meet different people's needs. By understanding the effect of their activities on different people, and how inclusive public services can support and open up people's opportunities, public bodies are better placed to deliver policies and services that are efficient and effective.

The new equality duty replaces the three previous public sector equality duties, for race, disability and gender. The new equality duty covers the following protected characteristics:

- age
- disability
- gender reassignment
- pregnancy and maternity
- race – this includes ethnic or national origins, colour or nationality
- religion or belief – including lack of belief
- sex
- sexual orientation.

It also applies to marriage and civil partnership, but only in respect of the requirement to have due regard to the need to eliminate discrimination.

The Council has also decided to treat people who have care experience as if they had a protected characteristic under the law.

Having due regard means consciously thinking about the three aims of the equality duty as part of the process of decision-making. This means that consideration of equality issues must influence the decisions reached by public bodies, including how they act as employers, how they develop, evaluate and review policies, how they design, deliver and evaluate services, and how they commission and procure from others.

Having due regard to the need to advance equality of opportunity involves considering the need to:

- remove or minimise disadvantages suffered by people due to their protected characteristics
- meet the needs of people with protected characteristics, and
- encourage people with protected characteristics to participate in public life or in other activities where their participation is low.

Fostering good relations involves tackling prejudice and promoting understanding between people who share a protected characteristic and others.

Complying with the equality duty may involve treating some people better than others, as far as this is allowed by discrimination law. For example, it may involve making use of an exception or the positive action provisions in order to provide a service in a way which is appropriate for people who share a protected characteristic.

The Equality Duty also explicitly recognises that disabled people's needs may be different from those of non-disabled people. Public bodies should therefore take account of disabled people's impairments when making decisions about policies or services. This might mean making reasonable adjustments or treating disabled people better than non-disabled people in order to meet their needs.

There is no explicit requirement to refer to the Equality Duty in recording the process of consideration but it is good practice to do so. Keeping a record of how decisions were reached will help public bodies demonstrate that they considered the aims of the Equality Duty. Keeping a record of how decisions were reached will help public bodies show how they considered the Equality Duty. Producing an Equality Impact Assessment after a decision has been reached will not achieve compliance with the Equality Duty.

It is recommended that assessments are carried out in respect of new or revised policies and that a copy of the assessment is included as an appendix to the report provided to the decision makers at the relevant Cabinet, Committee or Scrutiny meeting.

Where it is clear from initial consideration that a policy will not have any effect on equality for any of the protected characteristics, no further analysis or action is necessary.

Public bodies should take a proportionate approach when complying with the Equality Duty. In practice, this means giving greater consideration to the Equality Duty where a policy or function has the potential to have a discriminatory effect or impact on equality of opportunity, and less consideration where the potential effect on equality is slight. The Equality Duty requires public bodies to think about people's different needs and how these can be met.

5. This has included assessing accessibility to the sites. Those that are not accessible or in disrepair have been referred to Asset Management and Development for potential refurbishment or redevelopment. Council garage licensees all have a garage licence document and will be covered by the Garage Management Policy.
6. It outlines how garages are administered. As there are no changes or restriction of rights, no stakeholder consultation has taken place.
8. From the evidence available does the policy or function affect or have the potential to affect different equality groups in different ways? In assessing whether the policy or function adversely affects any particular group or presents an opportunity for promoting equality, consider the questions below in relation to each equality group: <input type="checkbox"/> Does the policy or function target or exclude a specific equality group or community? Does it affect some equality groups or communities differently? If yes, can this be justified? The Council reserves the right to give priority for the allocation of a garage to people with limited walking ability and are registered disabled.

□ Is the policy or function likely to be equally accessed by all equality groups or communities? If no, can this be justified?

The garage licence applies to all licensees.

Priority is given to Council tenants and leaseholders of the Borough, those who do not have a garage and people who want to use the garage for domestic purposes.

The Council reserves the right to give priority for the allocation of a garage to people with limited walking ability and are registered disabled.

□ Are there barriers that might make access difficult or stop different equality groups or communities accessing the policy or function?

It is the responsibility of the Council as a landlord to ensure that we maximise access for all groups. This would include the following actions:

- Arrange to translate the new garage licence for residents whose first language is not English
- Arrange appropriate additional support for residents who may not understand the licence (e.g. support worker invited to the sign up meeting).

□ Could the policy or function promote or contribute to equality and good relations between different groups? If so, how?

The policy ensures that a consistent approach will be taken and that the Council will exercise its duties within the current legal and policy framework.

□ What further evidence is needed to understand the impact on equality?

Using existing data held on garage licensees and those on the register, the Council will be able to establish whether there has been any negative or positive impact on residents and their ability to access the service.

9. On the basis of the analysis above what actions, if any, will you need to take in respect of each of the equality strands?

Age:

Some licensees have had their garage licences for a number of years. Older licensees may find it difficult to clear the contents of a garage when requested. Whilst this remains the responsibility of the licensee, each case will be considered to see what support can be provided by the Council.

Disability:

If a garage site is developed then garage licensees will be offered an alternative garage. It is acknowledged that this may be difficult for some people with a disability to move their belongings. Additional time will be provided where required and support offered if appropriate.

Gender:

It is not anticipated that the Council will need to take any further action in order to enable access for this group. Regular monitoring and analysis may identify reasons that have not been anticipated. Action will be taken to mitigate any barriers identified.

Gender Reassignment:

It is not anticipated that the Council will need to take any further action in order to enable access for this group. Regular monitoring and analysis may identify reasons that have not been anticipated. Action will be taken to mitigate any barriers identified.

Marriage and Civil Partnership:

It is possible that the policy could benefit persons who are in an established relationship because if the garages are in joint names and joint tenants, there are additional rights afforded in certain circumstances, such as death of a tenant.

New licences are in sole names only.

Pregnancy and Maternity:

If a garage site is developed then garage licensees will be offered an alternative garage. It is acknowledged that this may be difficult for someone who is pregnant or has a baby to move their belongings. Additional time will be provided where required and support offered if appropriate.

Race:

It is not anticipated that the Council will need to take any further action in order to enable access for this group. Regular monitoring and analysis may identify reasons that have not been anticipated. Action will be taken to mitigate any barriers identified.

Religion and Belief:

It is not anticipated that the Council will need to take any further action in order to enable access for this group. Regular monitoring and analysis may identify reasons that have not been anticipated. Action will be taken to mitigate any barriers identified.

Sexual Orientation:

It is not anticipated that the Council will need to take any further action in order to enable access for this group. Regular monitoring and analysis may identify reasons that have not been anticipated. Action will be taken to mitigate any barriers identified.

Care Experience:

It is not anticipated that the Council will need to take any further action in order to enable access for this group. Regular monitoring and analysis may identify reasons that have not been anticipated. Action will be taken to mitigate any barriers identified.

I am satisfied with the results of this EIA. I undertake to review and monitor progress against the actions proposed in response to this impact assessment.
